Actually, Air Technology Transfer Network is listed on the help page as a site that won't be indexed by snapshot. I didn't create a best bet. I did create one for Clean Water Rule.

I hate this crawler today. I sent Google a copy of the first article and told them the perceived omissions were their fault, although that's only true for two of four.

Radnet is indexed and available. I wouldn't bother. Yes, go ahead and add a Best Bet for that Air Technology Transfer Network web area page. Good idea.

Shall I go ahead and create best bets for Radnet and Air Technology Transfer Network, then?

The only complaints I see are the omission of these sites.

A pre-Trump version of the EPA website exists — you know, just in case

	In January, the Trump Administration ordered the EPA to take down its climate change page. At the time, Reuters reported staffers were “scrambling to save some of the information housed on the website.” It’s not clear if the EPA has removed anything, but now there is a record of the original site, just in case. ...
